The editor invites you to submit items of an interesting nature, including reviews, discussions about accounting theory or practice, responses to past articles in the journal. Perhaps you could find an accounting cartoon? In this volume we've included two submissions, both submitted by Barbara Merino, one, a review by Christopher Colvin of Queens University in Belfast of a book on antitrust. Another, a short on Pacioli found in Bloomberg.net. Our friend Alan Sangster may have a response to this. In both cases we received approval to reprint. Do you have thoughts for or against the convergence of IFRS and GAAP? What do you think of the possible leasing standard? Speaking of theory – why is there so little discussion of it?
